so they can participate in classes and activities remotely. The Technical Colleges are trying to do as much as they can remotely. This has allowed the Technical Colleges to focus on online classes and materials being fully accessible. Colleen Larsen reported some students with disabilities are doing very well in this environment and others are really struggling. However, this has been hard for trades and hands on majors and the Technical Colleges have resumed some of these classes in a hybrid format with some in-person as well as remote learning. The Technical Colleges also setup their food pantries in their lobbies so students can access them even though the campuses were closed.

- Council Updates

- Board on People with Development Disabilities (BPDD) – Gail Bovy thank David Morstad for attend a recent BPDD meeting. Gail Bovy stated that the BPPD asked her to emphasize the need for GCPD to work with Survival Coalition.
